- I utilized a combination of HTML and CSS to create the basic layout and appearance of my website. I utilized HTML to develop the website's basic structure, which includes features such as headings, images, and paragraphs. I then used CSS to style the HTML elements, such as fonts and colors. Beginning with HTML, I developed a header with the website logo and navigation links produced with the list element. Moving on to the rest of the page, the major body of the website all used a grid system created in CSS to help give a sense of organization throughout the website. This method was also utilized on the remaining pages. I placed a footer at the bottom of the page, which is an HTML element used to display information at the bottom of a webpage. A website logo, copyright information, links to other pages, and a newsletter are all included in the footer.
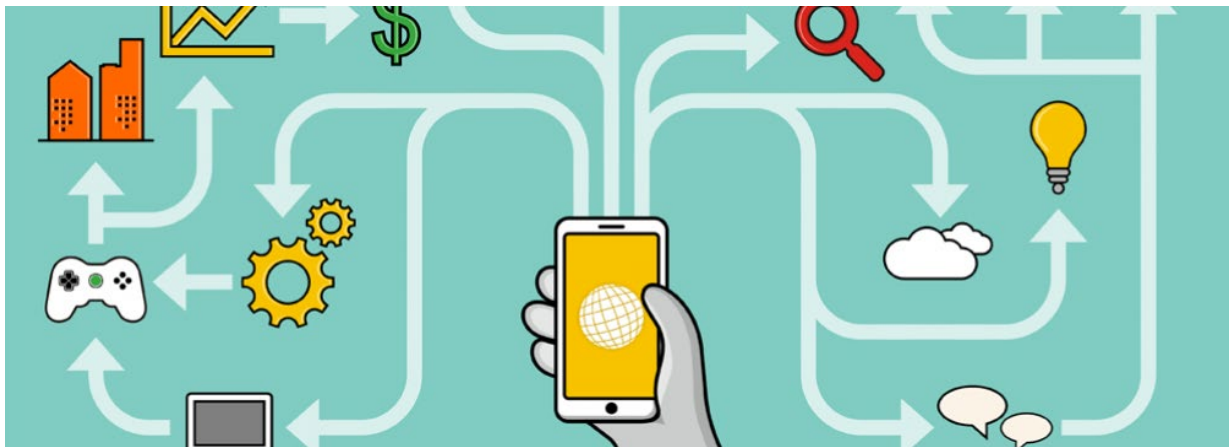

- No deviations or changes were made from the original plan, though there are certainly potential areas of improvement. For example, the home page could be improved by making the design more visually appealing, and the overall user experience could be improved by providing more information and resources on the different topics covered. Additionally, the articles could be better organized, with more categories and subcategories, to make it easier for users to find the information they are looking for. Finally, more images and videos could be added to make the content more engaging.

INTERNET SERVIECES AND ITS IMPACT ON THE WEBSITE
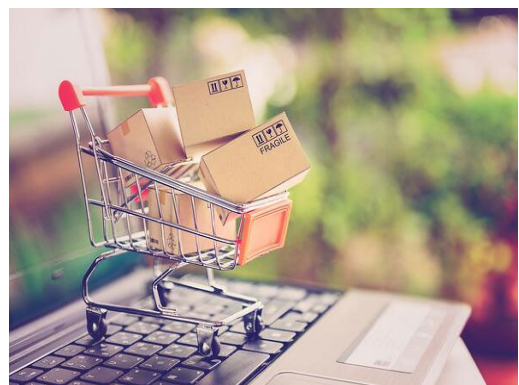

Communication Services

Include social media feeds: Incorporating social media feeds into your website is another way to add dynamic content to your pages. This could include a Twitter feed, a Facebook page, or a company blog.

Use live chat: Live chat is a great way to engage visitors and give them access to immediate help. This can help visitors quickly find the information they need and keep them engaged with your website.

Utilize video: Adding videos to your website can be a great way to add dynamic content. This could include highlights, special event videos, interviews, and etc.
